We publish a proclamation from Gen. Braxton Bragg, in order that it may have a wide circulation, for which the said Bragg least ten thousand dollars in Confederate scrip to lay it before our readers, and the Southern Confederacy is Indebted to us to that amount; and if Bragg gets here weshall expect him to pay it. This is the day of proclamations, and these invaders are prolific in weapons of the sort.

About this one there is a peculiarity which has not before appeared in Confed effusions. The Northwest is appealed to to stop the war which is waged upon the South. The Northwest has no interest in it. That section can have the free use of the Mississippi and all the advantages of trade with the South; each has what the other west should, therefore, prefer an alliance

Bragg & Co. ought to have thought of that before they started; before they under- buildings in the city. took to levy tribute on the trade of the Mississippi river and plant cannon upon its banks; before they undertook to insult the to any section of the country.

Is it not cool to tell a man that he may have the use of his own property if ho will behave himself according to your notions?

The Northwest is rather too sagacious to use her own property by permission of Braxton Bragg & Co. She will hardly be compelled to choose between Eastern and houses, if long continued, will be a serious eessful on many hard-fought fields-when Southern ports. She is part owner of both; she needs both, and will not give up either. This Northwest will always be troublesome to Disunionists East or South. She needs the commercial ports in both directions. We are not sure that she has not men enough and resources enough to whip both East and South into terms. Certain she has with the help she can get from those who have a common interest with her.

Kentucky, unless she forgets her own interest now and in all time to come, cannot separate from the Northwest. Neither Kentucky nor the Northwest can ever allow, the Southern or Eastern seaports to be under the control of a foreign power. Jeffer-The Great Plague of 1666 in Scotland.

General Order. COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

LOUISVILLE, October 6, 1862. In obedience to an order from the Com manding General of the United States Army, in reference to the proper efficiency and discipline of the military forces now in the field, I hereby request that the command-ing officers of Kentucky regiments will report at once to me ali vacancles that exist in the company offices of their respective commands, in order that such vacancies may be filled. And, concurring, fully as I do, in the views of Gen. Halieck, that the efficiency of the army is to be maintained and increased by the promotion of officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, and privates who have distinguished themselves in the field, or who have shown a capacity of military command. I desire at the same time to receive from the commandants of regiments, recommendations of all such officers or privates as deserve promotion, either by reason of faithful sorvice or deeds of valor. The prospect of promotion is the great incentive to the faithful performance of duty on the part of the soldier, and duty thus performed should constitute the chief basis of recommendation in the selection of those who are to be charged with Important military trusts.

I, therefore, direct that the suggestions of his order be at once compiled with, to the end that all existing vacancies may be filled, and the efficiency and discipline of the forces of Kentucky, now in the field, J. F. Robinson

Particulars of a Fight at Newtonia.

Latest from Richmond.

Latest from the Indian Difficulties.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 4. From a private lu the Sixth Kansas Cavalry, who participated in the fight at Newtonia, Tuesday last, we learn the following particulars:

Col. Solomon, on Monday, learning there was a rebel force-thought to be five hundred strong-at Newtonia, sent about six hundred troops—one hundred and seventy-five infantry, and the baiance cavalry—un-der command of a Major of the Ninth Wisconsin, whose name we did not learn, to drive them out. They charged into Mewtonla Tuesday morning, and found that the rebels had been heavily re-enforced, having a force estimated at 7,000, and six pieces of artillery. Onr men had to ge out the best way they could, the infantry fighting them hand to hand for three-fourths of an hour, as they fell back out of Newtonia. Company II, 6th Kansas cavalry, about forty atrong, were surrounded. alry, about forty strong, were surrounded, but cut their way out. The Federal troops feii back three miles, followed by the artillery, making six ln all, and in turn drove the rebels back into Newtonla. Considerable cannonading was kept up for some time between the two armles, our men now having three or four reglments. About night our troops commenced falling back to camp for the night. The rebels followed them, when our men turned on them, drove them back into Newtonia, and held the field. The Federal loss, during the day, was about 140 kilied, wounded and missing, probably most of them taken prisoners. Such of our wounded as fell into the hands of the rebels, were treated in a most barborous manner. The rebel loss is not known, but is thought to be larger than ours in killed and wounded. They were still at Newtonia at last ac-masters in the Southwest. WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. The Richmond papers of Saturday, are received. Morgan's Cavalry, having falled to blockade or much retard the progress of the Army of the Gap, struck off our line of march and took the road toward Lexington, burning and destroying houses, barns, hay and grain. In one district they burned forty-five houses, and all belonging to them. Their cruelty to the unoffending inhabitants at some points, seems almost incredible. Colonel E. gave me one instance as an illustration. An Inside View of Secession. LETTER OF A NOETH CAROLINA FATHER TO A CONSCRIPT SON.

The Washington Republican has received from Capt. Harrover, of the Second District regiment, a letter, taken from the body of a rebel soldier in one of the late battles in Maryland, which has been forwarded for publication. We make the following extracts from this epistle, which illustrate one phase of this wicked rebellion. We omit | names and particular localities, so as not to involve the writer in difficulty:

NORTH CAROLINA, July 4, 1862. My dear Son: # # # I hope these lines will find you doing as well as a poor soldier can. I have good news to write you. We have examined your age, and find you were born on the 18th of July, 1844, consequently the conscript law won't catch Show the enclosed certificate of your age to your Colonel, and come home, as you have a right. They say they have pressed all over and under the conscript age for nincly days longer. When that is out, come home, for you have as good a right to come as any of the rest. Though, I suppose, they will make some other law to hold you it they can, for they have broken three pledges already: 1. To let you all come home when your twelve months were out. 2. If you would enlist, they would give all furloughs to come home. 3. On the Bith they would let off all under and over age. They have not and will not fulfill one of these solemi pledges. They are not going to do anything OFFERS FOR SALE IN LOTS TO SUIT PUR they say they will, if they can help it, for they know they are badly whipped. Now they are conscripting. The conscripts here are the maddest men you ever saw. They say they don't intend to fight. They can make them go, but they can't make them fight. The most of them say they intend to go to the North the first chance; and I don't blame them, for there is no justice in such a war. There never will be peace till they kill off all the men, or they all rebel and come home; for it is given up by all the smartest men in this country that the North will whip-and the sconer the better. don't want you to fire another gun at the North, if you can help it. Do like some o the rest-shirk out of it. They say it is no

I heard this evening that - started this morning for the army. He has gone after his son D-. He says he is under age, and he will fetch him home to stay. * There are about 900 men at Warm Springs now, in camp. They are drilling every day.

I can't tell you anything about my feelings. Nobody knows my frombles but my-self. Your poor father has a great deal on him, as your sisters' families are now on my hands, since their husbands have gone to the war. There is a great deal of sickness here. J— L— has not gone yet. He has been trying to get somebody to go in his place, and failing in that, he made an effort to get appointed deputy postmasier, and various other ways to gr himself exempt. He says the Yankers will never get a pop at him. He and old G are the very men who ought to go, but they are the last who will. Since I began this letter, I have ascertaine that your Colonel has a perfect right to le-you off, on ascertaining your age, so my dear son, I have great hopes of seeing you in a very short time. You will have to pay back your bounty money before you cal get off. Your brother and sisters send their best love to you. Write soon and let us know what your Colonel says. still remain, as ever, your affectionate father and mother until death.

mother, and dear friends look for the cou ing of the "dear boy." "Broken pleilges sent the son to the bloody field of death. Waiting hearts, which beat high with the will wait in vain. Hope, fear, doubt, and despair will follow each other, as the intelligence of "missing" is brought home. The bitter words of the father, "there is no jus-lice in such a war," will burn into the hearts of many bereaved ones, who reflect for a moment on the cause of all this.

Proclamation by the Governor. COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY,) EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. To the Sheraffs of the counties of Christian, Henderson, Daviess, Muhlenberg, Ohio, Hancock, Breckinridge, Butler, Grayson
